The volume of data has grown exponentially over the past decade, to the point where the management of the data asset by traditional means is no longer possible. As shown in Fig. 1, big data trends have been enabled by advances in computing technologies, which facilitated the sudden explosion of data from various sources such as the Web, social media, and sensors.

In the United States, one-quarter of Medicare spending occurs in the last 12 months of life, which is commonly seen as evidence of waste. Einav et al. used predictive modeling to reassess this interpretation. From detailed Medicare claims data, the extent to which spending is concentrated not just on those who die, but on those who are expected to die, can be estimated.
